

ABSTRACT

A system for accessing health care processes includes a server, a workstation, a network and a procedure database. A user accesses the system by way of a graphical interface containing an image of a human body. By using a mouse, a user can view procedures relevant to particular areas of the human body. After selecting one of the listed procedures, the procedure is then displayed on a video display.

907128